French Heave Temperate Sighs At Breath-Testing Gendarmes

PARIS, Aug. 22 (AP) — A hallowed French custom, the wine-washed country lunch followed too often by a opsy drive home, is under attack from police armed with breathalyzer bags and a tough new drunken-driving law.

France has joined the rest of Europe, and many states of the United States, in empowering its police to carry out random breath tests oo motorists on crowded highways. It took a light to get the law through Parliament, and some Frenchmen are displeased.

Civil libertarians object to extended police powers, the motorists'

Parliamentarians from wine areas stalled the bill in committee for two years, but the statistics spoke loudest. Of 13,000 persons killed in French traffic accidents in 1977, at least 40 percent died as a result of drunken driving.

Since the start of the summer vacaoon, thousands of motorists have been flagged down and asked to blow into little plastic bags filled with crystals that go green when hit by boozy breath. Two thousand were checked last weekend, when the telltale green showed up only 10 times.

A violator can lose his driver's license for up to six years, a penalty perceived by many motorists as a catastrophe.

Nader Health Unit Pushes Patient's Right to Data

By Marlene Cimons

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — Ralph Nader's Health Research Group has launched a campaign to gain patients the right to see their medical records.

"Doctors and hospitals can refuse access altogether — or tell the patient only what they want him or her to know," said Ted Bogue, a staff attoroey with the Nader organizacon. Although access is difficult, Mr. Bogue said, it is not impossible if a person knows exactly what to do. The American Medical Association, the leading organization representing U.S. doctors, has long opposed allowing patients to view their records. An AMA official said that the group's position had oot changed since Dr. Joseph Boyle, a member of the AMA's board of trustees and a Los Angeles physi-cian, testified before the Privacy Protection Study Commission in

"In our opinion, this could result in our opinion, this could result in numerous cases in inapproriate disclosure of medical information," Dr. Boyle said. "For example, certain individuals, upon seeing their medical records, might decide to treat themselves. Other individuals might be unable to cope with learnviduals with psychiatric problems could be seriously harmed by learning of information in their medical records. There is also the very real problem that medical information with complicated implications could be misleading or not informauve without appropriate professional interpretation.

Argument Criticized

Mr. Bogue dismissed this argument, particularly as it applied to psychiatric patients. "No one is going to push people to read their medical records," he said. Strategic Needs

The renewal in production is based on technological and strate-gic needs. West European nations are confronted with nearly 15.000 Soviet tanks in Eastern Europe, about double the number owned by the Western nations. Thus NATO commanders want to know all they can about the Soviet tanks.

The U-2 can fly along the East-West border, scanning far into the-east with electronic sensors, and send data back to NATO commanders. The planes can also spot armored personnel carriers and

Florida Is Told to Give Up Claim

MIAMI, Aug. 22 (AP) - Treasure hunter Mel Fisher won a major court victory yesterday when U.S. District Judge William

Gen. Ahero said that, although the model is 23 years old, the technology for the type of mission it flies has not been surpassed.

The U-2, nevertheless, has its limitations, including its vulnerabil-ity to missiles. One U-2 was shot down over Cuba in 1962. At least four have been downed in China. U-2s also have crashed because they are extremely difficult to fly at low altitudes. While the Air Force will not divulge the cause, a U-2 crashed on takeoff in December at a British base on Cyprus. The plane, apparently beading for a daily reconnaissance flight over Egyp-tian and Israeli lines on the Sinai peninsula, 250 miles to the south, swerved just after takeoff and crashed into a nearby operations building. Five persons were killed.

The Air Force will not say wby the Pentagon does not use satellites for the type of surveillance per-formed by the U-2. The minimum altitude needed to keep a satellite aloft, however, is more than 155 miles, and it may be that the sen-sors needed to detect tanks would not be effective at that beight. Although the Air Force will not divulge the type of sensors used to pinpoint the tanks, electromagnetic devices are thought to be involved.

The Air Force is budgeting $10 million for each plane and $6 million for sensors. Other funds will go for spare parts.

Pentagon strategists argue that some of the U-2's problems can be solved. By keeping 30 miles or so behind any battle line, it can avoid most enemy missiles and still peer more than 50 miles into enemy ter-

Floyd Abrams, counsel to The Times, said that others, but not the newspaper itself, had already given to the courts and to defense lawyers for Dr. Mario Jascalevich, the accused in the case, all the papers that had been asked for in subpoenas served on The Times. Since the material already was available to the defense. Mr. Abranis said, the paper believed that no purpose would be served by withholding its own copies. It therefore turned them over to the trial judge last Friday, immediately after discovering, during a new search of its files, that it had nothing further that was asked for by the subpoenas.

Before that discovery. The Times had been refusing, on First Amendment grounds, to obey a court or-der requiring it to submit all information on the case in its files to the trial judge for examination. It was that refusal that led to the finding of contempt against the newspaper.

Decision Postponed

Superior Court Judge Theodore Trautwein, the judge who made the finding, postponed a decision on The Times' application until tomorrow, when the luwyer who searched the paper's files will be available to testify that they contain nothing else relevant to the

3 Balloonists Welcomed to Field of Glory

MISEREY, France, Aug. 22 (AP) - Three U.S. balloonists received a heroes' welcome from thousands of Frenchmen today when they returned to the field where they ended their transatlantic crossing last Thursday.

Accompanied by their wives, they arrived by car at the wheatfield where French and U.S. flags flew and a large crowd had waited for them for two hours.

"This is incredible," said Ben Abruzzo, as he, Larry Newman and Maxie Anderson elimbed out of their car to be swamped by the crowd.

A circle had been cut out of the freshly harvested field and covered with white sand to mark the spot where their balloon, the Double Eagle II, landed after a six-day nonstop flight from Presque Isle, Maine, for the first successful balloon flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

The proceedings before Judge Trautwein tomorrow will not affect Mr. Farber's status. Unless his lawyers can find a way of speeding the process of judicial review, he is ex-pected to remain in jail until Sept. 18, when the Appellate Divison of Superior Court will hear his and The Times appeal of Judge Trautwein's contempt findings.

Mr. Farber and the newspaper have been contending that the or-der of New Jersey Superior Court Judge William Arnold to turn over their files and documents to him for evaluation violates protections written into the Constitution and New Jersey's shield law for the con-fidentiality of news sources. 35.3 percent in May.

Cheap air fares played a major part in the 51-percent increase in visitors from Britain for the month of May, officials said. But the number of travelers from West Germany, where air fares bave not dropped as dramatically, jumped 30 percent - chiefly because of the dropping dollar.

An African Legend

Symbol of Fight For Liberation

FOREVER flicking his ever-present cowtailed flywhisk. and chanting harambee — pull logether — the white bearded Jomo Kenyaita was a utanic and legend-ary figure in Africa for half a century.

The father figure of East African politics. Mr. Kenyatta began his struggles for racial equality in the early 1920s and suffered long imprisonment at the hands of British imperialists to realize his dream of Jailed hy the British for leading black Africa's first armed inde-pendence movement, Mr. Kenyatta became an inspiration to the whole continent, which by the 1950s was embroiled in a struggle against Released just a couple of years before independence, Mr. Kenyatta became his country's first and only president and was widely credited with creating one of black Africa's most prosperous economies and stablest political systems.

Surrounded by the revolutionary governments of Tanzania and Somalia and the military dictatorships of Uganda and Ethiopia, Mr. Kenyatta delied independent Afri-ca's socialist trend and made Kenya black Africa's bub for Western husinessmen and tourists.

Mr. Kenyatta's anti-communism. his commitment to free enterprise and his quiet ties with Israel drew his country continually closer to the United States, but estranged Kenya from the mainstream of current African opinion.

Disappointed Youth

At the same time, Mr. Kenyatta disappointed the younger genera-tion of Africans who hoped that be might succeed Kwame Nkrumah as a rallying point for pan-Africanism. as the grandfather figure for their aspirations of independence and an African identity.

Mr. Kenyatta, who with Mr. Nkrumah was co-host of the Manchester Pan-Africanist Cooference in 1945, abdicated both roles and enigmatically never sought the continentwide influence which could have so easily been his.

Rarely speaking out on interna-tional issues, Mr. Kenyatta did not attend any Organization of African Unity summits after 1964 and rarely left Kenya after the mid-1960s. By advocating private enterprise and foreign investment and by keeping his distance from the struggles against white domination in southern Africa, Mr. Kenyatta's, prestige in the continent declined in his waning years.

Even in Kenya, where his identity was first and foremost with his Kikuyu, Kenya's largest tribe, Mr. Kenyatta's popularity dwindled, al-though he continued to be respected as "Mzee," the old and wise one.

His sole recent venture into international affairs failed when, in 1975 during the early stages of the Angolan civil war, he twice brought together the leaders of the three rival factions. Although the meetings in Kenya closed with unity proclamations. Mr. Kenyatta's efforts did not avert the ensuing war.

Mr. Kenyatta was imprisoned during much of the 1950s for his defiance of settler rule in Kenya. During that time, he became a symbol for the struggling, "we shall overcome" spirit of black people everywhere and for the new generation of Kenyan nationalists.

Symbolic Colors

In the 1940s, Mr. Kenyatta welded the Kenya African Union into a political party. He designed its green, black and red flag; the colors remain the symbolic colors of black nationalism in Africa and the Several U.S. black nationalists in music and politics have dropped their "slave names" in favor of "Kenyatta" or called their groups "Mau Mau." The black community of East Palo Alto, Calif., is now known as Nairobi to honor the resistance to white rule which Mr.

Kenyatta led.
But once his post-independence moderation was apparent, he be-came better trusted by the likes of Henry Kissinger, General Motors and Union Carbide than by radical black youths.

Kenyatta was born about 1890. He was an orphaned herdsboy who ran away from bome at world's richest men and to have acthe age of 10 to become a pupil in a mission school. There he was baptized Johnstone Kamau. He drifted into Nairohi and changed his name to Jomo Kenyaiia.

Entering politics after World War I as secretary of the Kikuyu Central Association and editor of preserving the fertile Kikuyu home-land from white encroachment. After failing to win redress from the colonial administration, Mr. Kenyatta took his case to London in 1929. He was again unsuccessful. Mr. Kenyatta returned home in 1946 and re-entered politics. By that time, he was already a legend-ary elder spokesman. His frequent outdoor rallies attracted up to 30,000 followers. Mr. Kenyatta consistently called for unity among Kenya's tribes.

While Mr. Kenyatta was making pleas for independence and racial equality, young Kenyans were or-ganizing for the armed campaign which was to become known as Mau Mau. Although he probably sympathized with them, Mr. Kenyatta stuck to his stance of nonviolence. Nevertheless, in Octo-ber, 1952, he and 98 African leaders were arrested. Mr. Kenyatta was convicted of managing the Mau Mau and sentenced to seven years imprisonment at hard labor. He served his sentence in a remote desert prison and was released. In his first public statement after his release, Mr. Kenyatta asked for mercy for those who had imprisoned him.

Muted Criticism

Many of the more muted accusations have centered on the president's family and other leading politicians. Mr. Kenyatta was often ruworld's richest then and to have accepted CIA payoffs. His fourth wife, Mama Ngina, was often linked to scandalous business practices, shady real estate deals and ivory and coffee smuggling.

For about a year, the Polisario has concentrated hit-and-run attacks against what it termed "the weak link" of Mauritania. On July 10, that country's president, Mok-tar Ould Daddah, was overthrown by a military government that pro-claimed its interest in a peaceful settlement of the conflict. The day of the coup, the Polisario declared a unilateral cease-fire.

The coup triggered a burst of diplomatic activity, including two meetings between President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France and Algerian Foreign Minister Abde-laziz Bouteflika, which seemed to signal an improvement in the bad state of French-Algerian relations.

Pakistan Faces Dilemma As Bhutto Verdict Nears

By William Borders

NEW DELHI, Aug. 22 (NYT) ---One of the more important court hearings ever held in Pakistan is drawing to a close, with the outcome far from clear. In n case beavy with political significance and international ramifications. former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto is appealing his conviction and death sentence on a charge of having conspired four years ago to murder a political opponent.

After three months of hearings fore the Supreme Court of Pakistan, Mr. Bhutto's lawyers have concluded their presentation, which means that the nine-man court could begin considering it early next month, after a couple of weeks of arguments from the prosecution.

"And whatever the court decides," a Pakistani diplomat con-ceded, "the government is faced with a serious dilemma." If the death sentence is overturned, regardless of whether the conviction is upheld or not, then the widely popular Mr. Bbutto, who has now spent nearly a year in jail, will continue to be a rallying point for the substantial forces of opposition to the military government, which overthrew him in a coup 14 months

Some Bhutto partisans fear that the Supreme Court might be influenced in its judgment by Gen. Zia's obvious hostility to the former prime minister. Promenade of 'Passion' Gets Audience Into Act

By John Walker

L UNDON (IHT) — The watch-word is "Do it" said one actor. "Il someone asks at rehearsal should he do something this way or that way, the director says, 'Just do it.' It saves an awful lot of time."

More properly, it's been dubbed "Promenade Theater" and it's one of the most successful ventures so far at Britain's National Theatre.

"The Passion," the play that be-gan it all earlier this year, has just opened in a new production and runs until Sept.2. "Promenade" de-scribes the way in which the audience walks about the auditorium. mingling with the actors (although seats are available for the elderly and infirm). "The Passion" — the berrayal and crucifixion of Christ is taken from the cycle of 48 medieval mystery plays originally act-ed in York mure than 600 years ago wagons which were moved about the city.

Trying to find a modern peripatetic equivalent, Bill Bryden, director of the Cottesioe Theatre, Sebastian Graham-Jones, his co-director on the project, and designer Wil-liam Dudley decided to take out the theater's seats and have the audience move around the open space, following the shifting action. Underground Classic

The result was so successful that they looked for another work to stage in a similar style and found it in a book of memoirs. Flora Thompson's "Lark Rise," pub-lished in 1939 and describing life in an Oxfordshire hamlet a hundred years ago. "Lark Rise" will run through September, "It's become an underground classic." says writer Keith Dewhurst who adapted it for the stage and regards both the plays as being in the great tradition of English theater — "arena stage rather than proscenium, full of music and

This work, in turn, had led them to investigate dramatizing other books. Michael Herr's "Dispatches," on the agonies of Vietnam, will be staged — though no one knows how — at the end of this year. courage and chuizpah. "Such acting as this requires a tremendous amount of bottle." he says, "In a normal plant an experienced actor can read an audience in five min-utes. With this, you've no idea whether the audience is liking it or not until the end."

Graham-Jones believes that the audience enjoys being next to the energy of the actors. The actors.

"The Passion," which was rewritten three times by 1400, was revised again for modern audiences by Tony Harrison, a poet with a strong regional bias, who disliked the way the plays have been staged in modern times at York with an actor speaking in an Oxford accent

Yorkshireness

"We've reinstated the Yorkshireness," he says. "The plays are a re-minder of what real community drama was, once." He has clarified the original text and added hits that were missing, such as the Last Supper, and a speech for Judas that has the crude, alliterative vigor of the original, beginning, "Unjustly injured, I Judas, by Jesus, that Jew

This, though written in the text, is not merely a dramatic device. The cross is huge and heavy - 16 feet long and weighing 210 pounds - and lifting it is difficult and dangerous. It is a nerve-wracking moment of drama, not the least for MeManus, high in the air, clinging precariously to the cross as it waves unsteadily before being heaved upright. And, in performance, the experience is a large and marvelous one, full of a simple mystery that owes much to Dudley's brilliant, cathedrai-like design.

In the audience's close encounter with the actors and participation in the events, and in the final good cheer — when the Albion Bank, one of Britain's best folk-rockers, struck up a lively dance and MeManus climbed numbly down from his cross to join in — it was possible to believe that some sort of community, however illusory and evanescent, had been ereated in that emotionally charged space, and that we all, and perhaps drama

So far, almost three years after the death of dictator Francisco Franco, and more than a year after parliamentary elections, Dumas has failed to give Spanish political life his approval. Until he does, museum officials say, the painting stays with them. There is some confusion, however, about the details of Picasso's instructions and the precise legal role of Dumas. As a result, some Spaniards are suspi-cious of the New York museum's

One reason why BMW cars are so exclusive stems from the original approach of their designers they concentrate on the most important aspects.

Unlike other manufacturers of top class cars, BMW quite purposely avoids obstrusive proportions and exhibitionist styling. Since the functional character of BMW cars does not tolerate any superficial embellishments the largest of the BMW range of cars is transgressing the rule that states that expensive cars have to be conspicuous.

This extraordinary concept appeals to an ever growing number of discerning drivers who see their car as a car, rather than as a status symbol to display their wealth.

Being able to choose performance without ostentation will be a luxury in the future.

Now is it new-built and sky-reaching. the site of many international conferences. the home of international agencies, a testimony to what Kenya — and Kenyatta — have accomplished in 15 years of independ-

There is a broad prosperity and stability about Kenyatta's Kenya that is exceptional in much of today's Africa. Its birth out of British East Africa was also exceptional: an intellectual surge by men of Kenyatta's drive and training was accompanied by the violence of the Mau Mau. But the Mau Mau did not win independence; independence was granted after the uprising had largely been suppressed and Kenyatta and his allies shaped a republic.

With such origios, and given the personal appeal that Kenyatta was always able to exert in his speeches and writings, one might have expected Kenya to continue to represent the best hopes of the new Africa. Not only did Kenya itself press forward, it linked with Tanzania and Uganda in the East African Economic Community. Like Kwame Nkruma. with whom he had been associated in the early days of the African struggle for independence, Jomo Kemyatta believed in the common oeeds and aspirations of all of Africa. But he was also a member of the Kikuyu tribe, which had to wrestle in Kenya with the Masai, the Somalis and others; party divisions appeared, sharpened by tribal differences. So in 1969. Kenyatta barred all opposition political parties. Kenya seemed to be flourishing, but there were tensions within the land, restlessness under the political domination of Kenyatta's tribe and fantily. And while Kenya became more closely knit by the police. Tanzania and Uganda split away, as their own brand of politics (especially that of Idi Amin's Uganda) became more visible and less accommodating.

Jomo Kenyatta dies with great accomplishments to his credit — but leaving behind a sense of uneasiness in all of East Africa. It remains to be seen whether the political unity he forged in Kenya will endure his passing: whether the dissension he suppressed will spring into life again; whether the discontent with his family's political and personal prosperity will take the form of a reaction against his whole regime.

What could happen in Keoya is what has happened in many new African states. The development of democracy, especially in lands that have been shaped by a diversity of tribal cultures, is far from easy. That Jomo Kenyatta made as much progress in Kenya as he did is no small tribute to his inspirational and administrative abilities. That his long life ended with the land he struggled for uncertain as to its political future, not wholly aware of what forces may be at work behind its fine modern facade, is a part of modern Africa's tragedy. But what is more important, oow, is for Kenya, and Africa, to cling to the hopes that mee like Keeyatta held out to them, and to give them permanent reality.

Varieties of Terrorism

Political conviction is still counted by the world as a virtue — but warily, and with the most emphatic exceptions. Coovictioo is the sustenance of liberty and justice, but oot everybody's ideas about liberty and justice are the same as Jefferson's. Political convictioo has its dark and crazy side. where argument is abandoned for the gun and the torch. The last few days offer a wide and melancholy selection of examples. They arise, as they frequently do. in the Middle East, and they seem to be acts of people who fear that they are about to be pushed aside by history.

In the Iranian port city of Abadan, on Saturday night, several people carefully and skillfully set fire to a crowded movie theater. burning to death several hundred members of the audience. It was not an impulsive or accidental act. The arsonists had calculated purpose, and no doubt it seemed urgent and compelling to them. Some of the Iranians to the United States have made the accusation that it was the work of the Iranian government's secret police. According to that logic, the government was attempting to discredit its opponeots by staging a spectacular crime that would be attributed to them.

Perhaps. But it's also possible — and, on present evidence, it's more likely - that the fire was what it seemed. Ramadan, the Moslems' mooth of prayer and fasting, has begun. Moslem militants have held angry demonstrations in a number of Iranian cities protesting the widespread violation of the religious rules and the government's refusal to enforce them. A number of restaurants and movie theaters elsewhere in Iran have beeo firebombed since the beginning of the holy month — a ferocious warning to the impious. The disaster in Abadao appears to be another indicator of the tension that develops in a country that is attempting to transform itself, within a couple of generations, from a highly traditional medieval society into a modern technocracy.

On the day after the Abadan fire, several Arab terrorists opened fire oo an El Al airlines crew in London. They killed an Israeli stewardess, as well as ooe of themselves. The affair was organized by the Popular Froot for the Liberation of Palestine, the most consistently bloody-minded of the Palestinian organizations. The PFLP represents political conviction in a pure and intense form, rendered especially irrational and dangerous by the circumstances that it is also hopeless. It is wedded to purposes that it can never achieve and that have been, in fact, abandoned in one degree or another by most other Pales-

The immediate purpose of the attack in London was presumably to incite a counterattack by Israeli forces that might derail President Carter's negotiations with the Egyptians and the Israelis at Camp David in early September. Israeli planes, as always, attacked a Palestinian camp in Lebanon.

In recent months a strange hit-and-run war has been waged, in both Western Europe and the Middle East, among various Palestinian factions and their respective backers in the Syrian and Iraqi governments. The representative of the Palestine Liberation Organizatioo was assassinated in Londoo last winter. That led to the attack on the Iraqi Embassy in Paris, several weeks ago, in which an Iraqi guard and a French policeman were killed. Society can protect itself fairly well against people who take out the gun for money. The people who bomb and burn out of conviction are infinitely harder to deal with.

International Opinion

The Moscow Olympics

Word has it that the Americans are seriously contemplating a boycott of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow as a protest against the Russians' brutal treatment of their dissidents . . . The Kremlin leaders are just as anxious to make a propaganda success -and incidentally a commercial profit in valuable foreign exchange — out of their hosting of the Olympics as Hitler was when he sponsored them in Berlin in 1936. To that end they are quite likely to be ready to pay the price of releasing the dissidents from prison

The main worry, to be sure, is not over Russian reaction but over President Carter's determination to go through with his threat. It would be better for him to do nothing than to start talking big and then retreat weakly. America's president should appreciate that he has in the boycott a weapon which Brezhnev and his cronies really fear. The question is, will he have the guts to use it? --- From the Daily Mail (London).

Amnesty for Nazis

There is something very unsatisfactory about the way in which Herr Franz-Josef Strauss, leader of the Bavarian wing of the West German Christian Democrats, has called for an amnesty for crimes committed during the Nazi era — except, that is, for concentration-camp atrocities and the murder of Jews.

In the first place it is largely concentration-camp atrocities that are being pursued in the courts, so the amnesty proposed by Herr Strauss would be unlikely to have much concrete effect. Secondly, and following from that, it looks more like a political gesture than a considered response to a genuinely difficult problem.

Europe's Odd Couple

By Leopold Unger

BRUSSELS — The most recent meeting between West Europe's Common Market and Eastern Europe's Comecon was not the definitive one: but it very definitely was a failure.

The EEC delegation, headed by Sir Roy Denman, the Common Market director of foreign rela-tions, and that of Stefan Velkov, a Bulgarian who is deputy general secretary of Comecon, went about their respective ways after four days of sterile conversations, without bothering to issue a communique. What the European Commission was left to ponder after Mr. Velkov's departure was not so much why the talks had failed, but why the large delegation (more than 20 persons) from Comecon had hothered to come at all. The history of EEC-Comecon contacts is a long one; long and unmoving. It started out with the EEC being taboo to Moscow and considered as "the economic arm of NATO" or "the means chosen by U.S. imperialism to exploit Europe," And the Kremlin's normal reaction in situations of this sort is boycott and insults.

Economic Reality .

It was Mr. Brezhnev who ordered an end to the interdict when io 1972 he discovered that the EEC was an economic reality. That dis-covery was not just fortuitous; the EEC had decided that as of January, 1975, it would have a joint commercial policy, that is, any trade agreement between any East-ern European country and any member of the EEC would have to go through the European Commission in Brussels.

Pragmatic as always, the Krem-lin then decided to move toward adapting itself to this reality. The first EEC delegation went to Moscow in February, 1975, apparently without disturbing a single snowflake on Red Square. This seeming non-event was followed by a series of exchanges of declarations, which finally bore fruit in September of last year, when Mihai premier and at that time presideot of Comecon, took a giant step and went to Brussels.

Things then started moving a little faster, Last May, Wilhem Haferkamp, a West German who is EEC commissioner of foreign affairs, went to Moscow. It was a short visit - only 24 hours - but it helped to set things straight.

It was a fairly simple task. If hoth sides agree that an accord is desirable, the basic contradictions remain the same: The two institutions are very different. The EEC Commission may speak to the name of the nine member countries and take initiatives in the name of all the Community members. The Comecon secratariat is only a technical unit that does not have the right to conclude trade agreements

Kremlin Control

The members of Comecon prefer to reach their trade accords sepa-rately and individually, particularly with the EEC. It is their way of avoiding, or at least of reducing, the Kremlin's heavy-handed con-

However, Mr. Haferkamp returned from Moscow with a rather precise scenario for future rapprochement: While showing full respect for the regulations of both sides, an agreement could be reached for exchanges of information in four fields: economic forecasts, statistics, protection of the environment and standardization.

Questions of trade were left to bilateral agreements between each Eastern European country and the

The hard line adopted by Comecon, whose delegation completely and ostentatiously ignored every-thing that had been said by Mr. Haferkamp in Moscow, does not come as a surprise. It is easily com-prehensible within the framework of the internal problems currently churning up the Eastern bloc. And the 32d summit meeting (at head-of-government level) of Comecon last June in Bucharest was proof of

This 32d summit meeting saw the failure of a Soviet attempt to change the satutes of the organiza-tion. The changes would have been tries. Moscow wanted to replace the principle of consensus for certain issues - particularly that of external contacts, thus contacts with the EEC — with a majority vote. This would have given the Kremlin the possibility of nipping in the bud any too-individualistic trend by any of its partners.

The host country, Romania, which is a lot less isolated from the rest of the world than its geographical position might indicate, led the resistance effort. The veto right is the were basic of Romania members. the very hasis of Romania membership in the Comecon. It has been fighting to defend this right since 1962 and only recently demonstrated its usefulness when it refused to join Bulgaria, Hungary, Czechoslo-vakia and the Soviet Union in a joint navigation enterprise on the Danube. It objected that its interests were not sufficiently represent-

According to reliable sources, the Romanian delegate in Brussels did not hesitate to let it be known at the meetings, "speaking as an individual," that his country had the sovereign right to have direct and bilateral trade relations with Comecon has not announced whether it has abandoned the concept of majority vote or merely put it off, but it is certain that the group cohesion of Comecoo has not been strenghtened by this issue.

Furthermore, Vietnam was admitted as the 10th full member of Comecon, and this was a surprise for a oumber of the heads of governmeot present, for the inclusion of Vietnam cannot be considered a boon to Comecon. The opposite is more likely true; it is a dangerous move whose repercussions are unfathomable

Vietnam cannot be compared with that of any member of Comecon. Furthermore, its future develop-ment will necessarily be different from that of the other Comecon members. The Comecon nations, which already pay a heavy tribute to Cuba and Africa, will now be forced to disburse even more for Southeast Asia.

Another Guest

"Each Polish family." the saying goes in Warsaw, "feeds a Cuhan and an African child. Now, it will have another guest, a Vietnamese." But the question, obviously, is more political than economic. And it thwarts the very nature of Come-con by imposing it a political. rather than an economic, responsihility, which stretches beyond the desires — and the means — of many of the organization's mem-

Comecon has allowed Moscow to drag it into its planetary game against China; it has been reduced to nothing but a tool in the fierce nivalry opposing the two Commu-nist giants. The inclusion of Viet-nam, which, as was the case for Cuba, can be explained only for strategic reasons. And it opens the door for even more inexplicable acts and incredible members: Afghanistan, a newly progressive country, as well as Ethiopia, Laos, Southern Yemen and Angola, which all sent observers to the talks

Now that Comecon is the tool of Soviet political strategy — and not only of economic cooperation — what were the real interests that its delegation represented in Brussels?

Times Are Leaner

For Wiretapping

By Tom Wicker

No upsurge in crime has resulted, either — as anyone who has studied the subject would bave known. And despite the distressed crys of hard-line police types, the evidence continues to mount that wiretapping is not a very useful tool of law enforcement.

Tapping for foreign-intelligence purposes may be somewhat more effective, although the security agencies buve never produced evidence to substantiate that claim. The decline in law-enforcement tapping therefore is all the more reason why Congress should pro-ceed to bring foreign intelligence tapping under the limited authority of the federal courts.

Authorization

All other forms of federal wireapping - for law enforcement and for domestic intelligence — now require a prior federal court authorization after a showing of probable cause that a crime is being, or about to be committed. A Senate-passed hill, supported by the Carter administration and at least profor-ma by the FBI and the CIA, would require a somewhat lesser showing and a court authorization for a foreign-intelligence tap placed in the United States.

A weaker version of this measure has been cleared by the House Intelligence Committee and the House Rules Committee and will come to the floor early in September, with cloudy prospects at best. On the one hand, Rep. Robert Drinan of Massachusetts, with the laudable motive of opposition to all wiretapping will lead a group of liberals who want to kill the bill; more threatening is the opposition of the Republican Policy Commit-tee, which wants to leave the whole question of intelligence tapping to the president's discretion (a pecu-liar position indeed for a suposedly conservative party).

Half the Rate

This year's report from the administrative office of the U.S. courts does little to support the persistent Republican view that wire-tapping is an effective instrument and it ought to be remembered that this same party, led by Richard Nixon, ooce promised to reduce domestic crime by using wiretapping on a broad scale,

The report shows that federal wiretaps placed for law-enforce-ment purposes fell from 137 io 1976 to only 77 in the first year of judge.

NEW YORK —It's not fashion-able, these days, to say any-that figure is adjusted to reflect that figure is adjusted to reflect tags placed in the last days of the Ford administration. Attorney General Griffin Bell is seen to have authorized taps in 1977 at an annual rate of only 68: that's half the rate of the last Ford year. rate of the last Ford year.

Within the overall total, moreover, tapping in the two most frequent areas of use also declined. In gambling cases, taps fell by 73 percent, from 53 in 1976 to 14 in 1977. in narcoucs investigations, the drop was 39 percent, from 36 taps to 22.

The reason is obvious. Carter and Bell did not have the belief in and committment to wiretapping that their predecessors had. The evidence, moreover, supported their skepticism. The 1978 adminis-trative office report, following up on taps placed in earlier years. shows that for the two Nixon-Ford years 1974-75, 667 out of 906 conrictions attributed to wiretaps -74 percent of the total — were for. gamhling, scarcely a crime of major interest to a fear-ridden public.

Most of these convictions were of minor figures in the gambling world, and even some of them may not have been really a product of a wiretap. And narcoucs was almost the only other area in which any . number of convictions were report- . .

Yet, the report puts the cost of one tap, in a racketeering case, at $156,706; it estimates that on this tap alone, 3,000 people were overheard in 9,883 conversations only 30 of which were deemed "incriminating" (which is not the same thing as getting a conviction in court) even by the prosecutor.

No arrest had been made at the time of the report, in this sterling example of hard-nosed police work.

Evidence Needed

Similarly, a set of three taps in a narcotics case had cost $273,578 and had resulted in no arrests despite the fact that a court is not supposed to authorize a tap without some evidence that a crime is planned or in process.

The Carter administration's reluctance to tap may have had some good effect on the states. No state gave its police new wiretap authority in 1977 (and none has in years); many states don't use wiretap authority previously provided; and in 1977, the number of state taps stayed at about the same level 549. — as in previous years. litical prisoners in U.S. jails at the time of the Shcharansky-Ginshurg trials was certainly infelicitous Even so, I cannot see that the substance of the statement can have prejudiced the trials of the Russian dissidents; and if it had some ephemeral internal propaganda value for the Soviet regime — so what? Are America and the Soviet Union competing for the hearts and minds of Soviet citizens?

On the other hand, for Americans the remark was relevant and timely - or would have been if it had been more skillfully formulated. The American system of criminal justice may be, in general, reasonable and fair. But the operation of the system is extremely variable; and there are more things happening in courtrooms and prisons than appear in the law books. I still won-der how many unfortunate black people - innocent, or guilty only of trivial offenses - have mouldered for years in North Carolina iails, sent there by the abusive, redfaced old bigot of a judge whose courtroom I visited in Durham in 1966. Despite the passing of insultudonalized racism, there will always be a fair number of bigots, sadists, and crooks engaged in enforcing the law — simply because they are a considerable proportion of the human species — whenever the vigilance of fair-minded citizens is relaxed. "Accidental" deaths occur in American prisons in circumstant no less unlikely than in authoritarian countries. Only the victims are likely to be, rather than dissident intellectuals or opposition political figures, poor black sons of sharecroppers convicted of petty theft in Arkansas, or Indians hauled in for public drunkenness in North Caro-lina. Without doubting the borror of life in a Siberian labor camp as described by Solzhenitsyn, Americans ought to be no less cognizant of the brutality endemic in some American prisons as described, for example, in Havwood Patterson's autobiographical "Scottsboro

Boy."
To be sure, "there is no overt political imprisonment" in the United States, according to the 1977 Am-nesty International Report, but only "it is suspected that many people may be 'framed' on eriminal charges because of their political activities or ethnic origin." The dis-inction between being prosecuted for one's views on direct order of the Polithuro and being persecuted just for heing who one is and for being stuck in a decrepit corner of an otherwise free society is important for ideological debate, but not for humanitarian concern. The administration's commend-

Recognizing the need, Carter said in his third dehate with President Ford "I would also like to completely revise our criminal justice system" (New York Times, Oct. 23, 1976, p. 11), If the president could begin to take steps toward realizing his election wish, he might thereby give greater coherence, credibility, durability, and effect to his advocacy of buman rights. Defense of Derian

The Evans and Novak column criticizing Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights Patricia Derian (IHT, Aug.7) appeared con-currently with two articles that well illustrate how badly misdirected is the columnists' focus.

One article recalled the U.S. government's security aid to the Uruguayan government in the early 1970s. To the continuing shame of all Americans. (a major European director, Costa-Gavras, made a movie, "State of Siege," about this sad time) the aid included sophisucated devices for torturing prisoners under interrogation, along with detailed instruction and advice on their employment.

I consider it an extremely positive development that, under President Carter and Assistant Secretary Derian, U.S. policies toward this sort of aid and these types of law-enforcement tactics have changed. Apparently Evans and Novak do

Their lead paragraph begins by referring to Philippine Foreign Minister Carlos Romulo as one of the United States' "best Asian friends." A second article, also in that day's Tribune, details several incidents illustrating the atrocious human rights situation in Mr. Romulo's nation. Mr. Romulo is not America's friend. His country's corrupt and tyrannical government is, or ought to be, the moral enemy of every American who believes in the validity of the basic principles of human freedom and dignity upon which the nation was found-

Rhodesia Policy

The New York Times editorial, "For Holding Firm in Rhodesia" (IHT, July 25), is a tragic display of "conventional wisdom" seeking to silence the pleas-of-the majority the moderate, peace-searching peo-ple of Rhodesia/Zimhabwe, black and white. Continued sanctions, according the above facts, one must conclude that the American African policy is based on fear of rejection by Nigeria and a keen desire to back a winner in the African liberation movement. Human rights, democratic institutions, freedom, onemanne-vote are non-issues. The U.S. policy is thus being shaped by oil and a national ego that would rather "back a winner" than worry about the rightness of the cause. Is it any wonder that the Internal Settlement's pleas for recognition hased on free elections, majority support and constitutional guarantees generate little reaction within the administration? What is needed to save Rhodesia/Zimbahwe is not irrelevant "conventional wisdom" hut traditional Western concern about the individual and his claims on freedom and his right to be heard. China Growth a Bonus for West

LONDON, Aug. 22 (AP-DJ] — Recent indications that China plans to become a large-scale huyer of factory equipment abroad presents both opportunties and potential difficulties for the non-Communist industrialized nations that are likely to become Peking's main

Indeed, if the attraction of China draws more visitors to the Far East, other countries io the regioo will probably share in the benefits.

United to Apply for Route to China

United Airlines said it will file an application with the Civil Aeronautics Board for routes between the United States and the Far East, including regularly schedule service to China. United said the new application is meant to supplement, rather than replace, an earlier route awarded between Portland-Seattle and Tokyo. A United spokesman said the airline has not had any discussions with China about its interest in establishing regular passenger service.

A number of other airlines also have put in requests for landing rights in China, as the country gradually has opened up to tourism. However, availation sources say it is unlikely that China will grant these applications until it has better facilities, such as hotels, for coping with a large influx of tourists.

Yen's Rise Cuts Steel Exports by Japan Concerns

TOKYO, Aug. 22 (Reuters) — Japanese steel products have been losing their export competitiveness following the sharp yen appreciation against the dollar, the Japan Iron and Steel Exporters Association said here today. The association estimated Japan's steel exports in July at about 2.6 millioo metric tons, down about 20 percent from 3.29 million tons in July, 1977. Exports to the United States, the biggest customer for Japanese steel, have been hit hardest by the yen's appreciation, which has made exports more expensive.

They say that if ample oilseed harvests io Brazil and other countries materialize, "we could wind up with a fairly substantial oversupply," as Paul Leventhal, a soybean specialist at Smith Barney's Chicago office, puts it. "If Brazilian production comes back in 1979 (from this year's unusually low level), it will put our prices un-der pressure," adds Merill Lynch. Brazil is the major competitor of the United States in the world soybean market.

Important Crop

The outlook for soybean prices is watched closely by most of the food iodustry, a large part of the commodity-futures world and many farmers. Besides being an important crop, it is the most actively traded commodity on futures mar kets. The meal and oil obtained from crushing soybeans are used as feed and as processing ingredient in foods ranging from margarine to steak.

Last year's generally poor oilseed harvests outside the United States created unexpected demand, which soll is being filled by U.S. exports Indeed, overseas buying of U.S. soybeans in the year ending Aug. 31 is expected to show a 25-percent rise from the previous 12 months to 705 million busbels. A principal cause of the upsurge was the drought that curbed Brazil's soybean harvest last spring. Currently, "the U.S. is the only country with any soybeans to sell," says Stan Gazelle, a department Consequently, analysts say, U.S.

exports will continue their strong pace at least through April 1979 when Brazil's next crop will be harvested. Mr. Gazelle says stroog U.S. export gains until then will more than offset the reduced sales that would follow a large Brazilian harvest. The department says overseas sales of U.S. soybeans for the year ending Aug. 31, 1979, likely will show a 2-percent increase from the current year's high level.

Domestic demand also is expected to continue firm, largely as a result of increased pork and poultry production due to rising beef prices. Hog and chicken raisers use as much as 70 percent of the soybean meal consumed in the United States, some analysts say.

However, Conrad Leslie, a Chicago-based crop forecaster, notes that a record 6.5-billion-bushel corn crop is expected this year, a development that could reduce the use of soybeans in animal feed.

THE DINES LETTER says:

The Original Goldbug Is Proud That It Has Never Yet Flashed its Major Gold Sell Signal!

When gold reached an of-lime high at $198 the strict literal truth is that anyone who ever bought gold outright and who still held it on the day gold mode an ell-lime high, held that gold at a profit. Conversely, those who recommended gold's safe were wrong because the profit from $35 to $200 is 471%, and few who ever sell gold repurchase at a lower price. THE DINES LETTER has given only one signal on golds buy at $35 and hold it as a conservative, long-term investment, like land.

"TDL's Latest on Gold" column gives in-depth coverage on gold, currencies, and international monetary affairs; it's written personally by Mr. James Dines, "The Original Goldbug," based on his being the first Wall Street Security Analyst to publicly and continuously recommend gold since May 1961 at $35.

THE DINES LETTER was almost discredited in 1975 when it insisted that its gold bull markel signal first flashed at $35 was still alive, that the $197 peak of December 1974 would eventually be surpassed, and that therefore long-term investors should continue to HOLD GOLD. Now that gold has actually moved into new all-time high ground above $197—for Dow Theory and Elliatt Wave Theory Upside Breakout confirmation—where are the doubters and gold-haters? Where they should be, in Wall Street's trashcan. Our track record stands for itself and for anyone to compare. Don't you want to find out what the Original Goldbug says about gold new?

THE PINES LETTER has littless ment investiments and market to doubt the standard of the same and the sa says about gold now?

THE DINES LETTER believes most investors are unable to short-term trade gold nthy and successfully. THE DINES LETTER has therefore been against trading the precious metals and instead has recommended a course of just buying and holding, despite any steep temporary decline. Mr. Dines believes that those who follow this strict path will be abourd for what he has predicted since 1960 would be "An Historic Bull Market for Gold & Silver."

IS IT TOO Late TO Buy Gold?

Are you tired of being on the wrong end of currency fluctuations? How much of your money is in a hard asset, independent of political promises, and how much of your wealth is this protected? Could you survive a wage of bank failures? Mr. Dines believes that putting President Carter in charge of ending inflation is like hiring Dracula to run the blood bank. In every year since December 1968, Mr. Dines has Dracula to run the blood bank. In every year since December 1968, Mr. Dines has stubbarnly and unflinchingly warned that we were entering a "long and bitter bear market" ending in what he baptized "The Second Great Depression." When? THE DINES LETTER believes the world is already well into it, but that it is essentially conceoled by a bizzard of first paper money. Mr. Dines labels this an "infression" or an inflationary depression, and gives specific recommendations to assist you in protecting your wealth. At a time of inflation when there are no shortages, rising prices derive from an excess printing of paper money. Doesn't it shock you that the U.S. currency, called "The Atmighty Dollar" a mere 2 decades ago, is now a collapsing spectacle? How many understand that the Washington Economic Establishment (WEE) has created the death of the dollar by printing too many of them, as THE DINES LETTER has so long predicted they would? Now Corter blames the problem on oil imports. Well, Japan, Germany and Switzerland import much more of their oil than does the U.S., and they all have strong currencies, low inflation rates, low unemployment, and lower interest rates than does the U.S. Thus something other than oil must be a factor. Let THE DINES LETTER explain to you what that specific investment advice.

When Yoth Think of Cold—Think of The Dines Letter

When You Think of Gold—Think of The Dines Letter

• We are at a rare juncture with both gold AND the market rising ensemble. What does it mean, and what about The Dines Rule of Gold Contracyclicality? · How is "The Dines Theory" like "The Dow Theory?" (Revealed for the first time.)

• Will There Be a Depression?

• Will the U.S. Dollar Rise Soon?

THE DINES LETTER is more than a market letter, it is a symposium of our times and on education in economics. Neither mathematics or economics is needed. You'll never know if we can be of benefit and service to you unless you actually see a copy of our market letter for yourself. We especially recommend the extended six-month trial to give you a fair look at all THE DINES LETTER's features without renewal notices right away. Why not send in the coupon while you're thinking about it?

THE LUCK OF NINEVEH

WE ARE listening to Austen Henri Layard, who, at age 22 in 1839, set off from London to Ceylon and got sidetracked by some mounds along the Tigris River, one of which turned out to be the Nineveh of Genesis, the capital city of an Assyrian Empire that lasted 1,300 years until its collapse in 600 B.C. Layard is talking about the winged lions, the bulls, the black obelisk, the double sphinx, the stelae and bas reliefs be would the stelae and bas reliefs be would send by raft to Baghdad and hy ship to the British Museum: "A few hours more and they were to stand no longer where they had stood unscathed amidst the wreck of man and his works for ages. It seemed almost a sacrilege to tear them from their old haunts to make them a mere wonder-stock to busy crowds of a new world. They were better suited to the desolation around them; for they had guarded the palace in its glory, and it was for them to watch over it in its ruin. Layard was one of those swashbucklers of the Victorian age, those splendid amateurs, who went places, discovered things, pluodered the past, wrote memoirs, mixed in politics and started modmixed in politics and started modern archaeology. He grew up on "The Arabian Nights." After a skimpy education — oo Eton or Oxford for him — and five years of drudgery as a clerk in his uncle's law office, he went east and stayed in Asia Minor for eight years, fighting off Bedouins and Persians and scorpions and foreign secretaries, trafficking with Kurds, languishing with "ague." in brobbels and in with "ague," in brothels and in ruins. Although he couldn't tell one potsberd from another, and didn't care. Mesopotamia was his play-pen. He seemed to carry the Hanging Gardens of Babylon around in

And, as Arnold Brackman points out, he was lucky. He had to be, Nobody, not even the Royal Geographic Society, wanted to give him much money. It helped that, 20 minutes after be stuck his shovel ioto the first of the mounds that obsessed him, he hit a wall, and that 24 hours later he had discovered two palaces that had been hid-log for 2.500 years. Heinrich Schliemann dreamed of and looked for Troy all his life before finding it. Layard, whose exploits inspired Schliemann, was famous before he was 30. He spent the rest of his husy life in and out of Parliament and the diplomatic corps, hobnob-bing with Charles Dickens and writing monographs on Italian, Dutch, Flemish and German art, and articles on the Crimea. Cavour, Russian expansionism and Abyssinian affairs.

Brackman, who is also the author of "The Dream of Troy" and "The Search for the Gold Of Tutankhamen," clearly likes the self-made Layard. He prefers him, in fact, to the heroes of his other two books. the "pompous" Schliemann and the "ascetie" Howard Carter. Most readers will agree. Layard was brave, even reckless, but an adventurer with a sense of humor. And he was a natural democrat, which may have accounted as much as his luck for his success in Asia Minor. He got along well with everybody except the Persians. He was the son who, invited to a ceremony of dec-il-worship, wouldn't miss it. His il-worship, wouldn't miss it. His diggers revered him.

It's a good story. Each dig is exciting. The supporting cast is well-drawn, with the appropriately engaging eccentrics. Take, for instance. Henry Rawlinson, who helped to translate the cuneiform tablets and thus, with the art Lay, and found recover for its Assession. ard found, recover for us Assyrian civilization. ISuch as it was: the distinctive contribution of the Assynans would seem to be the use of genocide as an instrument of state policy.) It isn't altogether necessary that Rawlinson, the East India Company's political agent, should have had in his Baghdad household have had in his Bagndad household n pet mongoose, a tame black panther and a Mesopotamian lion-ess as a personal bodyguard, but it-livens up the proceedings. Then there was the beautiful young Bak-tiyin woman who was offered by Mehemet Taki Khan to Layard it only Layard would convert to

I have two complaints and one question. There are no photographs, no drawings, there is not even a map in "The Luck of Nineveh," and there should be There might have been room for illustrations if some of Brackman's casual prose were removed "lucked into it." "game plan" "lucked into it." "game plan":

almost eight years," and so on.
The question is one Brackman dismisses in an author's note. Do - Americans. English, French. Germans — have a right to hoard, io our museums, the art of the past often carted away by gunboat from its home? "Although one may empathize with Turkish and Iraqi officials," says Brackman, "their position is absurd." To be sure. Turkey, like Greece, was once indifferent to its antecedents, But governments and cultural climates change. More to the point: Our imagination of antiquity is dangerously fragmented wheo the winged lim is in New York and the ruins of the palace are 5,000 dusty miles away. Still, the book beguiles, Living stone. Chinese Gordon. Darwin, Lord Curzon, Cecil Rhodes and now Layard — whatever trouble they caused, gallivanting around in the 19th century, they were probably preferable to Tiglathpileser and Esar-Haddon, who deserved the prophecy of Ezekiel.

4 World Records Broken In Swimming, Boggs Wins

From Wire Dispatches
BERLIN, Aug. 22 — Four world records were broken tonight at the world swimming championships here, two by women and two by

The new marks were set hy Cynthia Woodhead of the United States in the 200-meter freestyle, Yulia Bogdanova of the Soviet Union in the 100-meter breaststroke, Jessie Vassallo of the United States in the men's 400-meter individual medley and the U.S. men's team in the 4 x t00-meter freestyle.

Earlier. Phil Boggs of the United States won his third consecutive world springboard diving title with a lawless performance.

Boggs recorded the day's joint highest score with 70.56 on his last dive to total 913.95. Falk Hoffmann of East Germany, the European champion, placed second with 873.33, while Franco Cagnotto of Italy, the Olympic silver medallist, had to settle for the bronze with 845.51 points.

Last of Eight

The U.S. champion, Jim Kennedy, had difficulty all afternoon with his take-off, and finished last of the eight finalists with 814.73.

Boggs's opponents had slight chance of beating him for the gold medal since he carried over half the points he accumulated in trials yesterday and thus led hy 20 points before the finals.

Ohviously happy afterward, he was asked to explain his continued success. "I guess I just love doing it." he said. "I feel just as excited

Little League Opens Series

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Aug. 22 (AP) — Eight teams of young baseball players from around the world hegan play here today in the 32d annual Little League World Series.

The first quarterfinal round pitted the U.S. Eastern champions from Rockville Centre, N.Y., against the Western team, San Ramon Valley, of Danville, Calif. The European champions from the U.S. Air Force Air Base at Torrejon, Spain, will face the Latin American winners, Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic.

Tomorrow's quarterfinal games will pit the Canadian champions from Surrey, British Columbia, against the Far East representatives from Pin-Tung, Taiwan. Also, the U.S. Southern team from Lexington, Ky., will face the Midwest champs from Palentine, Ill.

The two victorious U.S. teams will play each other, as all the two teams, in Thursday's semifinal with the championship on Sat-

Orantes Gains In U.S. Tennis

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 22 (UPI) — Defending champion Manuel Orantes, lacking his usual consistency and concentration, overcame Belus Prajoux of Chile yesterday, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, to advance to the second round of the U.S. Professional Tennis Champion-

Orantes, seeded tourth this year, fell behind in the first set, but rallied to win the last five games. He then went ahead 4-3 in the second set, but Prajoux evened the score and took three of the next four games to tie the match.

Orantes built up a 5-1 lead in the third set, only to have Prajoux win the next four games before Orantes regained his form, winning the match on a cross-court forehand that caught Prajoux flat-footed.

In other first-round matches, fifth-seeded Harold Solomon beat Geoff Masters, 6-4, 6-2; eighth-seeded Arthur Ashe beat Erick Iskersky, 7-6, 6-1; ninth-seeded John McEnroe beat Vladmir Zednik, 6-1, 6-2; 10th-seeded Buster Mottram beat Bernard Fritz, 6-3, 6-3; and 13th-seeded Jaime Fillol beat Robin Drysdale, 6-1, 6-2.

In other matches, Paulo Berto-lucci beat Mike Fishbach, 6-2, 6-0, and Zeljko Franulovic beat Howard Schoenfield, 6-4, 5-1, when Schoenfield was disqualified after hitting four balls over the fence.

When Past May Yet Be Future

By Rob Hughes LONDON, Aug. 22 (THT) -

When is a man past his prime?
The question is begged often enough of those who play, gamhles are taken virtually every time a "mature" athlete (age 28 or over) is transferred between clubs or given a new contract. However, this week's $164,000 question concerns not a player, but a manager.

Jock Stein was, until yesterday, a man with a past — the first British cluh manager to bring home the coveted European Cup but, at age 55 going on 56, considered a has-been whose pensioning-off by Glasgow Celtic was symbolized a week ago by a testimonial match against Liverpool that grossed him

From there on, the hig man, as all Scotland affectionately refers to the most successful manager in the nation's history, was "moving upstairs," living off the fat of a directorship and a desk joh and being on hand to correct the faltering steps of a younger manager whom he taught as a player.

Do you then expect one of your past adversaries - a going concern with even greater potential - to pluck you from the slumber of such working retirement?

Outside of sport, and soccer in particular, it is cloud cuekoo land. But wait didn't we mention illness? We did, Stein was motoring along in an unprecedented run of nine successive Scottish League championships in 1975 when a road accident almost took his life.

Browns Use 2 Fumbles To Defeat Lions, 14-10

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22 (UPI) - Rookie quarterback Mark Miller helped the Cleveland Browns turn two John Brockington fumbles into touchdowns here last night and register a 14-10 victory over the Detrnit Lions in a National Football League exhibition game.

Safety Thom Darden recovered Brockington's first fumble early in the third quarter and ran it back 13 yards to the Browns' 44. Miller. showing considerable poise, directed the Browns on a 5-play, 56-yard drive, capped by a 1-yard pass to Doug Dicken.

The key play of the drive was Miller's 39-yard pass to rookie receiver Keith Wright, who took the ball to the 1. The score tied the game at 7-7.

Late in the third period Brock-ington lost the ball on his 16-yard line and Cleveland defensive end Mike St. Clair recovered, running it to the Lions' I. Miller handed off to fullback Mike Pruitt for a touchdown, putting the Browns into the lead for the first time at 14-7.

The Lions constantly pressured Brian Sipe, Cleveland's No. I quarterback, with a tough pass rush in the first half, sacking him several times. Miller completed his first six age jumors, but Baldwin indicated those contracts would not be accepted by the WHA either.

Colts' Owner Blocks Accord With Mitchell

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 (UPI) — A tentative settlement in the protracted Lydell Mitchell contract negotiations fell through today when the Balti-more Colts' owner, Robert Irsay, refused to accept terms negotiated by two of his subor-dinates.

Members of the National Foothall League's Player-Club Relations Committee met for more than 12 bours yesterday, discussing Mitchell's grievance accusing the Colts of racial dis-crimination. Mitchell reportedly is seeking a $200,000-a-year contract and negotiations broke down Aug. 8. Mitchell has refused to practice or play with the team.

The Colt general manager, Dick Syzmanski, and his assistant. Ernie Accorsi, negotiated with Mitchell and his Pittsburgh attorney. Lee Goldberg. The four reached agreement late last night but Syzmanski then noti-fied the NFL Players' Association executive director, Ed Garvey, that he had no authority to accept it and that Irsay had refused.

"I'm just shocked," said Mitchell, the Colts' leading ground gainer and pass receiver.
I thought we had a settlement last night, and then I find out that the owner won't live up to ently advised. "You're three years younger than I am and you've plenty of appetite.

Those words, and Stein's one comment that "I cannot say the post of Celuc pools chief [running a fund-raising scheme] appeals to me," perhaps swung the issue. Stein had recently rejected out of band a had recently rejected out of hand a lucrative offer to manage in Kuwait, he had another offer from the United States on his doorstep, hut he had known for two months that Leeds was interested.

He dithered only slightly when Leeds followed up its interest with a $52,000-a-year bid. He went incognito - sunglasses but otherwise unmistakahly the hig man — to watch Leeds play at Arsenal last Saturday. He talked round his wife who had once preferred to stay in Scotland rather than be the wife of the manager of Manchester United. And yesterday, with his accountant at the wheel, he motored to Leeds to begin a new challenge.
Stein admits it's "a bit late in the.

day" to be trying his hand in English soccer. He admits he promises no instant return to the success Leeds knew under Don Revie, but he admits, too, to a still feverish ambition to run a successful Euro-pean soccer team. His new chairman - whose board hired and fired Brian Clough within 44 days and then grew impatient over the team-building of Jimmy Armfield so he too was sacked - says not very convincingly that the board is united, that it knows Stein is the best man (unt fourth best behind its previous eboices?)

Explaining the Job Cussins also says his new manager will "show he can still motivate players: discipline them and keep them happy.

As Stein prepares for his first battle — tomorrow against Manchester United, a team which includes Scottish internationals Joe Jordan and Gordon McQueen bought from Leeds for almost $2 million last season - one thing is certain: Someone, somewhere is terribly wrong about the value of Jock Stein.

He has warmed to the challenge, a man not likely to have had his head turned by the flattery of being in from the cold. He inberits a club once run by Revie, an extremely close friend, whose advice he sought on the Leeds job. Another whose advice Stein took is Lawrie McMenemy, who a month ago turned down the same job. Someone, somewhere knows how the wheels turn but the hig man and his accountant know best that he has taken over a club and a team re-huilt by the forgotten Armfield and in need of little more than discipline and experience.

Amateur 'Naturopaths' and the Plant Kingdom

By Jane E. Brody

NEW YORK (NYT) - Herbal preparations, used for 5,000 years as medicines and tonics and still the mainstay of folk remedies throughout the world, are enjoying a surging re-vival in the United States, Many people, disillusioned with or dis-trustful of modern medicine, have turned to them in ao attempi to cure whatever ails them or to "preserve" their health. concerned about the possibly harmful effects of cof-fee and ordinary tea, have switched to supposedly healthier or safer herbal teas, dozens of which are now widely sold in health food and other stores. These amateur "naturopaths," unaware that herbal teas may contain any number of potent chemicals that can disrupt the normal functions of body and mind, are often unprepared for the consequences of their innocent forays into the plant king-

Although they are sold as foods and thus not subject to federal drug regulations, herbal teas are drugs, not foods," says Dr. Ara Der Marderosian, professor of pharmacognosy at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Scieoce.

"They are," be said, "crude complexes containing many impurifies and arrive components. with a variety of possible undestrable effects. Some are actually 100 dangerous to be used at all."

Dr. Der Marderosian pointed out that because the active constituents are generally present in very low concentrations, moderare consumption of berbal teas rarely presents a problem for the healthy. But, he continued, the concentration of active ingred-ients can vary widely, depending on the growing conditions of the plant, the parts of the plant used and the way the tea is brewed. In addition, some people think that if something is good for you, more is better, and as a result they may consume enough of the active herbal ingredients to produce a toxic effect. "These are not substances to be used frivolously." Dr. Der Marderosian warned.

PARIS (IHT) — Herbal preparations," I learo from Jane E. Brody's article, presented herewith, "are enjoying a surging revival in the United States Many people have upped States. Many people bave turned to them." It appears that this is a learsome development. The reaction it provokes from me is: Bully for them!

The spectacle of viewers with alarm looking askance at the cambric tea with which my grandmother lulled herself night-ly into sound slumber (true, she was cut off just before reaching her 90th birthday) dredges up from my memory other in-stances of alarm about admitting one substance or another ioto the buman organism. There is, for instance, the case of that eminent New York physician of the mid-19th century, Dr. Martyo Payne, who frighteoed his generatioo by informing it that garden vegetables in general and almost all fruits were bad for the health. In 134, the Chiengo Democrat printed a story about two boys

"partook freely" of oranges and coconuts: "In short time one was a corose and the other was reduced to the last stage of

After the Spanish discovered the tomato in Peru and brought it to Europe, two centuries elapsed before anybody dared eat it. Until the beginning of this century, many Americans be-lieved it caused cancer. As late as 1904, a U.S. cookbook warned: "Waters in which vegetables have been boiled can be used in cooking, except potato water and cucumber water. They have been known to poisoo a dog." (Maurice Messegue, a French guerisseur (healer), bas said, "I jump when I see bousewives, in the belief that they are doing well, throw away the juice of their cucumbers. It is like throwing away the juice of an orange.")

There was some justification for mistrusting the tomato, for it was totally unknown; but the regarded with a similarly jaun-diced eye bave been with us for centuries, and many of their imbibers have survived until natural death ensued. True, both tomato and potato belong to the family of Solanaceae, and so does deadly nightshade, which is being shaken menacingly at us - in rather curious fashion, from the point of view which is being expressed, for it is ool alleged that anybody is making an berhal tea from it; it is cited as an ingredient used in the commercial pharmaceutical products which I gather are being presentteas. It may be terrifying to learn that a young man (unnamed and unidentified) suffered a horrible fate (he cut his feet) from drinking jimsonweed tea, but nobody sells jimsooweed tea either. He must have made it for himself. I am inclined to doubt that U.S. addicts of herbal teas "have turned to them in an attempt to cure whatever ails them." It would be my guess that persons with an acute ailment go to a doctor for treatment; oobody expects a cup of vegetable tea to care a disease. If people drink herbal teas for reasons of bealth. it is not to vanquish a specific malady, it is to keep the body supplied regularly with whatever it requires, just as they eat balanced diets for the same pur-Most of the dangerous poten-tialities seeo in berbal teas by those afraid of them exist in at effects," I fear we must face the fact that pharmaceutical drugs are really drugs, too, and can have dangerous side effects. It is a valid argument that the strength of chemical substances in an herb is variable, and in practical use unmeasurable, so that in taking herbs one is dealing with an unknown quantity. A synthetic drug can be manufactured to precise strength, which permits the doctor to prescribe standardized doses. It remains only to standardize the patient.

There is one element about Jaoe Brody's article which makes me uneasy: It reports only one point of view, that of orthodox commercialized medicine, It is, of course, the duty of doctors and pharmacists to issue warnings when they think the public health is being endangered, and I do not question their siocerity when they flinch at berbs. But all the same they are competitors of the berb dealers, and I would be more comfortable If someone from the other side were heard from.

they know the strength and com-position of the herbal prepara-tion, or that there are no side effects from herbs. Four persons developed life-threatening infections and one died after self-treatment with Chinese herbal medicines to re-lieve arthritis and back pains. The herbal medicines were laced with potent painkilling and anti-inflammatory drugs that can de-stroy infection-fighting white blood cells.

"People don't realize that herbal preparations were once available only in pharmacies." Dr. Der Marderosian said. "They were used as drugs and the druggist would tell the purchaser how to prepare them to get the desired effect

Some medicinal teas are too dangerous to be on the shelves of any food store, according to Dr. Der Marderosian. Among them are mistletoe, a "calma-tive" that contains toxic proteins that can produce anemia and hemorrhage in the liver and intestines; shave grass (horsetail or equisutum), a diuretic and dyspepsia agent which has tox-ins that can produce severe ocurological reactions, and sassafras tea (made from sassafras root bark), which contains safrole, an established cause of cancer and a potent inhibitor of certain liver

Other herbal preparations can have severe and terrifying effects on the mind. Some contain psycboactive compounds, including stimulants, hallucinogens, narcotics, sedatives or euphoriants. A 37-year-old woman who drank ourneg tea became incoherent, giddy, flushed, dizzy and had frightening hallucinations. A young man who drank a tea made from jimsonweed suffered hallucioations and became total-ly disoriented, wandering in the woods barefoot, cutting his feet badly and lighting fires to scare off the "voodoo people."

Dr. Ronald Siegel, pharmacologist at the University of California at Los Angeles School of Medicine, who reported these two cases of berbal iotoxications and five others, cautioned doctors to ask their patients about the use of herhal preparations whenever investigating the bri-gin of any medical complaint.

Wallace to Be Host On Holy Land Tour

Gov. George Wallace of Alabana. who will leave office near January with no permanent employment yet in sight, has accepted a one-week stint as tour host for a trip to the Holy Land in mid-February. The governor's press office confirmed that Wallace would at as host for the tour, to leave from New York Feb. 14, but said that professional tour guides would lead sightseers in the party through sightseers in the party through Jerusalem and Tel Aviv. Wallace will receive a fee, the amount of which was not disclosed. Wallace was not available for comment by his office said that he had long been interested in making such a trip. The pilgrimage is being arranged by Echols Tours Inc. of Birmingham, which specializes in vis. mingham, which specializes in visits to the Holy Land. A spokesman for Echols said that 350 tn 400 persons were expected to make the trip, paying $1,300 each. "The governor has friends all over the constry, so we expect people from everywhere," he said. * * *

An attorney for Jacqueline ton nedy Onassis bas confirmed the Mrs. Onassis has purchased 375 acres of land on Mortha's Vinc yard, a Massachusetts island south of Cape Cod. Alexander Forget, one of Mrs. Onassis' New York attorneys, said that the purchase was made to preserve the "unique beauty and wild state" of the land Mrs. Onassis reportedly paid $1.15 million for the land in Gay Head last January. Forger said that no announcement was made regarding announcement was made regarding the purchase "in the hope that the tranquility of the island might be spared the intrusions and publicity that so frequently accompany her life." Forger said that since the purchase of the land has been rumored. "this acknowledgement of ownership may end the unwaranted attention to the island brought on by rumor and special.
